Mediation Style

I adopt a "Purposeful"-style of mediation, listening first to the parties' goals for choosing to mediate and adapting my approach to those goals, the nature of the parties, and the nature of the dispute. Achieving settlement is always important but, no less important, is the transformative element of equipping the parties' with a renewed belief in their own ability to resolve future disputes. I endeavour also to strengthen the relationship between the parties to the extent necessary for a contract to be satisfactorily performed.

Mediation Experience

I mediate all kinds of disputes and have particular experience in complex transnational commercial disputes, medical negligence disputes, construction and infrastructure disputes, banking and finance disputes, and employment disputes.
